Dear Gregory,

What an amazing inspirational experience your presentation for my Managerial Accounting students was!

Starting with an intriguing question to hold their attention, you led them into the topic of your presentation and generated so much interest that the 46-student classroom, on the night before Thanksgiving break, held their breath trying to not miss a word of your lesson.

You presented a complex topic, providing your audience with a clear roadmap and sound logical step-by-step structure, so that at every point they were able to see the entire picture and understand where within the presentation they were placed at each given moment. This large audience of evening students, who came to class after a full workday, had gone through the review of a week's worth of homework and had taken a test right before your presentation started, were energized and eager to absorb every piece of information you presented because of your captivating presentation style.

The well-researched lesson you delivered touched on all parts of knowledge of immediate interest to my students – Accounting courses at Ohlone, finding your first professional job, analyzing the reasons for success and failure, building your own business, professional networking, and academic achievement. We were fascinated with your ability to relate to the audience and to have an on-going dialogue with your listeners and your personal, quite dramatic and successful attention-holding presentation style.

We are inspired with your speech and are greatly appreciative of the opportunity to have had you as our guest speaker.

Sincerely,

Maria U. Ku, CPA
